

Feel My Muscles

Women have seven stages in life: infant, little girl, miss, young woman, young woman, young woman, and young woman. Men also have seven stages: infant, little boy, little boy, little boy, little boy, little boy, and little boy. Men need proper affection from women (the right women) because they are stuck in the "little boy" stage. That's why a ten-year-old boy says to his mother, "Mom, look at me. Aren't I strong? Feel my muscles." And mom agrees, "You are so strong. You're wonderful." When he turns sixteen, his mother starts to point out his faults. "Clean up your room. Make better grades."

So he turns to another woman, maybe about fifteen years of age. "Aren't I strong? Feel my muscles," he says. And she agrees. They eventually get married. But if she isn't careful, she will become more of a mother than a mate. She will begin to nag and focus on the negative. Then what will this "little boy" do? He'll likely do what most "little boys" do. He needs affirmation. He needs someone to tell him how strong he is. He needs someone to feel his muscles. So he will look for another woman.

The Devil's Sister

One day, 30 guys got together to watch a football game. As they were sitting around the living room enjoying hot dogs, popcorn, and soft drinks, an uninvited guest walked into the room. It was the Devil. They recognized him immediately. The room got very quiet. Then the Devil addressed the crowd. "I am the Devil, and I am here to get you!" With that, 29 of the 30 men ran out the door, fleeing for their lives. The other fellow just sat there, watching the game. The Devil was rather confused. "Did you hear me? Do you know who I am? I am the Devil! Why are you just sitting there?" The man replied with a calm voice, "You don't scare me. I've been married to your sister for 37 years. You can't be any meaner than she is!"

I know people who feel that way about their marriage. I read about a lady who went to a gun shop to buy a revolver for her husband. The salesman asked, "Did your husband mention any model that he liked?" She said, "No. He doesn't know I'm going to shoot him yet." Here's the lesson. Marry the right person. Otherwise, you will have a devil of a time being happy.

Trip to Beijing

The woman applying for a job in a Florida lemon grove seemed way too qualified for the job. "Look, miss," said the foreman, "have you had any actual experience in picking lemons?" She said, "Well, as a matter of fact, I have! I've been divorced three times." For those of you trying to turn your "lemon" into lemonade, good luck with that! But I'm here to help. Spice things up a bit. Read the Song of Solomon in the Old Testament. It is filled with passages about a man and his bride romancing one another. I know a lady who went to see the movie, "Romancing the Stone" because she was looking for tips with her marriage. Song of Solomon will help.

Here's what one fellow did. He took his wife on great trips. His buddy asked which trip was the best. He said, "Beijing. On our 25th wedding anniversary, I took her to Beijing." "Wow! That's impressive," said his friend. "What are you going to do for your 50th anniversary?" "I'm going back to get her," he said. Whether it is big trips or little notes, do something to spice things up a bit. Read Song of Solomon. You might learn something.
